DEDICATION

While living in Beirut, I have had the chance to meet a lot of foreigners who visit the country each for his/her own different reason. Many of them were struggling with the language, since the Fusha, which they had made a lot effort to learn, didn't seem to help. (The modern standard Arabic or Fusha is a very decent and eloquent language that unites, and is the official language of, all the Arab countries.) The reason for that struggle is that every Arab country has its own dialect that differs from Fusha.

If your destination is Lebanon, than I recommend this book in order to feel free and confidant talking with the locals.

For the love of my country, which is sometimes very hard to love but at the same time very hard to leave, I dedicate my book to my language and to everyone who is willing to learn it.

PREFACE

So yes I'm still here in Beirut Lebanon. I'm here asking myself everyday whether I should stay or leave. In this corrupt country where we often find ourselves struggling to find a bit of happiness and something that looks like peace. Beirut is getting even more crowded, and to think that we never thought it's possible! From poor public transportation to lack of green spaces and of course the never-ending waste crisis that sadly no authority is trying to solve, one would wonder what makes so many remain here.

Putting aside all of the above, there still are some very convincing reasons to stay! I simply cannot imagine my days passing without seeing my family, friends, my wonderfully moderate summer-like winter, my happy hours in Badaro or Gemayze, or my road trips to our beautiful villages. With all the new positive vibes growing stronger, I still have high hopes in Lebanon, I believe in change, in the new generation that is willing to create, read, plant, or even recycle in the hope of creating more sustainable living conditions in this nation that is yet to model its true identity.

Having said this, I really want to thank you for following me on my YouTube channel that is celebrating its fifth years by now. Thank you for believing in a better Lebanon just like me. Thank you for coming back, for visiting, for finding your Lebanese roots, for teaching your children and also grand children your original dialect, thank you for your curiosity in a culture that you've grown up in or just heard about it.

Thus, I dedicate this second book to all the good reasons that make me happy to stay here.

Wishing for peace and peace only, salam

سلام

INTRODUCTION

The following introduction is also present in the previous volume. It mainly lays out the method and guidelines that will be used throughout the book. If you already own Vol. 1 you probably have read this and already understand how it works. If not, I recommend you go through it because it will make reading the translations and transliterations much easier.

The method of teaching is vaguely inspired by the Rosetta Stone method that teaches the dialect through using practical sentences instead of memorizing strict grammatical rules.
All the words and phrases are transcribed from the videos, so there will be a reference to the relevant video below each sentence. You will be able to hear the correct pronunciation in order to master your accent and find detailed explanations of each word in complicated phrases.
The sentences will be divided into themes like "Introductions" or "Travelling" and they will be written in 3 forms:

1. In English first.
2. Then in Lebanese transliteration (Latin alphabet) for people who can't read Arabic.

3. And eventually in Lebanese (Arabic alphabet) for those who are Arabic literate.

Transliteration Guidelines

Since the Arabic alphabet is quite different from the Latin one that does not include the same letters, we'll have to agree upon certain rules that we'll use throughout the book as to avoid any confusion. The representations chosen will be based on their simplicity in contrast with the academic but more complex symbols such as [ʔ] or (ħ). There will be a table presenting each letter and its transliterated representation, preceded by an explanation of some of the letters used. While the table might only be useful for Arabic readers, the explanation will help all readers to recognize the sounds of the transliteration. If any of the following information seems too complicated for you, don't worry, you will find it to be simpler as you go along and read the actual words and phrases. These are just guidelines you can refer to if you find any difficulty in reading transliterations:

1. The Hamza (ء) which is a glottal stop, is not a full letter and is not one of the 28 letters of the alphabet but it is widely used in the language and especially in the Lebanese dialect, as in most Lebanese areas, the Qaf (ق) (pronounced as a "K" or a "Q" in standard Arabic) is pronounced as a Hamza and labeled as a glottal stop. The Hamza is phonetically represented as /ʔ/ while academically represented as a "modifier letter right half ring" (ʾ) which will be replaced by an apostrophe in this book (ʿ). You might find it to be represented with the number (2) on the web, as this is the conventional chatting representation of it, inspired by the inverted similarity in shape of the (2) and the (ء).

2. The Aleph (ا), the first letter of the Arabic alphabet, takes many forms, depending on its accentuation and on the placement of the Hamza in relation to it, facts that change the way it sounds. It might sound as a glottal stop or as a long vowel. For this reason, in cases where it sounds as a glottal stop it will be transliterated as a simple Hamza (ʿ) and in cases where it sounds like a vowel, it will be represented with the respective vowels (a), (e), (i), (o), or (ei). The latter, (ei), is used as the sound of the accentuated letter (é).

3. Thaa' (ث), is an Arabic letter that sounds like (th) in English words like (th)ink or ba(th), but in the Lebanese dialect it is most commonly replaced by either a (t) or an (s) sound. So it might be written in words as a (ث), but pronounced as is written in the Transliteration. (Ex: Snow=Talej= ثلج)

4. The Arabic letter (ع) or Ayn has no similar letters or sounds in the Latin alphabet. It is articulated with the back of the throat and the root of the tongue. It is phonetically represented as /ʕ/, while its academic representation is the "modifier letter left half ring" (ʿ) which is similar to the representation of the Hamza. In order to avoid any confusion between the Hamza and the Ayn, the latter will be represented as it is in chatting forums with the number (3) because of its mirrored resemblance to (ع), letter "3ayn".

5. Ghayn (غ) is a variant of 3ayn (ع) in shape but is different in sound. The closest popular equivalent to its sound is the Parisian French (r). It is phonetically represented as /ɣ/ but most commonly transliterated as (gh) which we will use throughout the book.

6. The Haa' (ح) which is similar to the 3ayn in articulation (with the back of the throat and the root of the tongue) but different in phonation is represented phonetically as /ħ/ and academically as (ḥ) while in this book it will be represented as a capital (H) which is usually the simplest symbol of the Haa'. You might find that it is sometimes written as a (7) because of the number's resemblance to the upper part of (ح).

7. The Khaa' (خ) is pronounced in a way that is very similar to German, Scottish, and Polish (ch), Russian (x), and Spanish (j). It is phonetically represented as /x/, while its most common transliteration is (kh) which is used almost everywhere and is therefore used in this book. You might also find it to be represented as (5) which also resembles a distorted mirrored (خ) missing the dot.

8. Thaal (ذ) and Thahh (ظ) which are variant of each other, and resemble the sound of the English (th) in (th)is or fea(th)er, is most commonly replaced by either a (d) or a (z). Ex: Memory=Zeikra= ذاكرة)

9. Finally, some words end with the sound (é), or might have this sound in the middle of the word. These will be transliterated as (eh) in the end, and (ei) in the middle.

As for the Lebanese words written in the Arabic alphabet, words ending with the (a) sound in Lebanese will be written:

1. as (ا) whenever the same word in Modern Standard Arabic end with (اء) or (مَا) like حَمراء or عَندها, written as حَمرا or عَندا

2. as (ة) whenever the word is feminine and has a masculine version, like رايحة

3. otherwise, they will be seen as (ه)

CHAPTER 1: BASIC LANGUAGE

Basic: the word basic means "aseis" in Lebanese. It could be used to say we are in the first stage of building the home, we are building the aseis.

An additional meaning would be "it wasn't meant to be in the first place": bil aseis (or aseisan), ma kenit zabta

Aseiseh on the other hand can be used to ask: is it something really important? Houwe chi hal'ad aseiseh?

Songs: kifak enta, Feyrouz (wait till she says enta el asasi/ aseiseh w bHebbak bil asas/aseis)

CHAPTER 2: CONJUGATION

I definitely hated the conjugation at school. This is why I only chose to conjugate some pretty awesome verbs: to travel and to love. I believe that if we are constantly in love and visiting new places then we are pretty close to finding happiness! In summer, Beirut international airport always witnesses high traffic of tourists and expatriates alike. If you haven't visited Lebanon yet, you really should plan a trip soon! Therefore I tell you

Tousal/ tousale bil salemeh (arrive safely!)

Hamdella 3al salemeh (good thing you arrived safely)

CHAPTER 3: AT HOME

Home! So what is it like living in a Lebanese home? No matter the class you come from, low, middle or high, your weekly homemade menu would most certainly be made of Mjadra (lentils and cooked rice) and loubiyeh bi zeit (green beens in oil) on weekdays and Macheiweh (barbecue-meat, chicken and the like) on weekends. And yes family does come first. On Sunday you are bound to invite your teta and jeddo, khalo and 3ammo (grand-parents and uncles) if they haven't sent you the invite first. I for one usually fast on Saturday night so I can eat all the good stuff on Sunday!

CHAPTER 4: WORK AND STUDYING

For me, unlike school, university has been a really fun time. After all I studied drama! In Lebanon, children go to school for 15 years starting at the age of 3. Lebanon once again offers various top-notch schools and universities that provide high quality education.

As for work, it is certainly not very easy to find a job here! Demands obviously exceed offers leading thus to increasing immigration.

Ya3tik/ ya3tikeh el 3afyeh (after someone finishes any kind of physical or intellectual task).

CHAPTER 5: BODY AND DOCTORS

Not a happy chapter hein? But hey think about the cure not the illness chou ye3ne hal jemle? In almost every family, there is a doctor. Not only is it a source of pride for every extended family member, but also a national glorification. Lebanese doctors have indeed excelled in various domains. Plastic surgery makes no exception, it actually gave birth to medical tourism whereas many arrive to our capital in the hope of leaving it while looking prettier!

CHAPTER 6: POLITICS

I definitely dislike this chapter. Nowadays Politics mean war, dying kids, terrorism, refugees, world hunger and every other atrocity one can think of…It goes without saying that Lebanese politics leave much to envy as means of conducting a country! The fact that the nation has been running without a president for more than two years should give you clear evidence of the above.

Wishing for peace and peace only.

CHAPTER 7: FORMALITIES

Ah formalities… This is definitely a chapter that all Lebanese are very familiar to. We've been raised hearing a lot of "3ayb" (fault/ disgrace), of kellak zo2 (you're full of good manners), of iza ma fi te2leh (if it's not too much to ask)…

Lebanese are attached to traditions. Some are still very pleasant to see: standing up while someone enters or leaves the room, visiting your grandparents every week, walking with your guest at the door and staying a few or long moments saying bye and 're'catching up… I still remember as a kid searching for mother only to find her 30 minutes later at the door still conversing with her favourite neighbour Tante Rita!

Nowadays, a lot of this happens through social media, even visiting your grandparents…

CHAPTER 8: EXTRA

The word extra is used a lot in daily situations. Especially when ordering street food you would say: I want one faleifil, with extra tarator (taHini dressing)

Baddeh waHad faleifil, tarator extra.

Now this chapter sheds light on "soccer". And when it comes to soccer, Lebanese take it pretty seriously. Our two most popular football teams are el nejmeh (the star) and el ansar (the fans) both based in Beirut. International championships barely leave any Lebanese neutral. Fans are highly supportive of either the Brazilian or the German team… Restaurants, cafes and every single balcony would be stacked with people watching the game and cheering their favorite players while wearing the full (authentic or not) team's uniform of course. Celebrations will then follow throughout the night typically honking cars making as much noise as possible so that no adversary shall ever find sleep again!

Wazzeklo (when you make fun of the other team's fans because they lost)

Mabrouk: to congratulate the fans of the team that won.

CHAPTER 9: TEXTS

PRESENT TENSE

First visit to Lebanon

I now arrive to Rafi' el Hariri Airport in Beirut. It's the first time I visit Lebanon. My name is Nora and my father is Lebanese, my mother is English.

My father each day tells me about Lebanon and about Kyeim, his village in southern Lebanon. I'm so excited to go to the south, but before I want to explore Beirut.

My friend Maher, is waiting for me outside the airport, he wants to invite me to lunch at a restaurant in Hamra.

(Nora and Maheir in front of the airport)

Nora: Maher! I'm here, I miss you a lot!

Maheir: Nora ya Nora, missing you a lot, finally you came to Lebanon! I hope you are hungry because I'm inviting you to the best restaurant in the town.

Nora: I'm starving, looking forward!

(In the car)

Nora: Ohhhh, too much traffic! It's been 1 hour on the road!

Maher: yeah it's normal, this is Beirut! From the airport to Hamra you need 10 mins in the night, but 1 hour in the day!

Nora: and ohhh it's so hot, I'm suffocating!

Maher: if you keep on nagging, I'll throw you outside the car hahaha

(At the restaurant)

Nora: finally we arrive to the restaurant, my mood changed! After the hot weather and the traffic I'm going to order Tabbouleh.

Maher: heh, are we just going to eat Tabbouleh? You will see, I'm going to ask for a special meza. Excuse me, we want to order.

Waiter: Go ahead.

Maher: Ok so, we want 1 dish of tabbouleh, 1 dish of spiced potatoes, 1 Hommous, 1 plate of raw sheep's liver, 1 plate of fried kebbeh and of course 2 glasses of 3ara'.

(Nora on the phone)

Hello, good evening dad. I can't tell you how happy I am! I wish you are with me. I'm now in Rawche doing sports and after going to party in Mar mkhayel. How is the weather? It's too hot but more chilling in the evening than in the day.

I'm going to Khyeim on Sunday, ok I kiss you and big hello to mom. Love you!

PAST TENSE

Today I woke up at 6:30 in the morning, I drank my coffee, i took a shower, I ate, i wore my clothes, and I left home.I was going to Achrafiyeh, I stood in the street, and I waited for a service (taxi), the first one came, I told him -To Achrafiyeh. He told me I'm not going there.I waited for a second car, I told him: Hello to Achrafiyeh, he said: servicein (paying double), Achrafiyeh is far. I told him yes. I stepped up in the car, I payed him 4000ll, and arrived to Achrafiyeh. There, I sat in a cafe, that has a delicious coffee, I ordered a cafe latte, without sugar, and I waited for the meeting that I had. I waited for the guy, he arrived. I told him : Marhaba, ana Hiba. He told me Hello, I'm Mhammad. We talked me and Mhammad, and we agreed to start a new work next week. Me and Mhammad, are going to open a charitable organization, I'll telle you the details later in another video. we finished the meeting, and I felt very hungry.I called my frined and told her: Allo Hi Christelle, do you have time for lunch?. She said yes. we met me and Christelle, in an Italian restaurant that have a delicious pizza. I ordered a Margherita and Christelle a vegetarian. we ate and drank a glass of white wine. We paid the check, and I went home buy service, and she returned to her work. I arrived home, I made coffee, I sat on the balcony, and felt that the weather is really beautiful and the Spring has started. I drank my coffee, and this is how I spent my day. See you soon!

Beach tomorrow?
(a dialogue between Yasmine and Salwa)

-Yasmine: How do you think the weather will be tomorrow?
- Salwa: Tomorrow, it may rain. But the day after tomorrow the weather will surely be beautiful and sunny.
- Yasmine: So we'll go to the beach after tomorrow.
- Salwa: Rabih and I can't, we have work. But tomorrow we're taking the day off.
- Yasmine: Ok, so we'll go to the beach tomorrow for sure. Do not forget to call Yasmine and ask her if she feels like coming with us.
- Salwa: I will call her later. Who else do you want to invite? Maybe Talal and his family?
- Yasmine: Yes his wife is nice, and that way, his children will play with ours. We will have fun. Who will take us?
- Salwa: We'll take two cars. One group will go with me and one group with Talal, if he comes.
- Yasmine: If we tell him that lunch will be fish and Arak, he will come for sure.
- Salwa: So the plan is fixed. It's like we're traveling! We've been talking about it for one week!
- Yasmine: True! Ok so I will get moving. What will you do?
- Salwa: I will finish some work before the kids arrive. I want to send an email to a client to show him how work is progressing. Then I will shower and wear my clothes so I go bring the kids from school. And you, what are you up to?
- Yasmine: Me too I have work. And in the afternoon we're going to the mountain, the weather is wonderful now. We will run and maybe we sleep there.
- Salwa: The important thing is that you don't get late for the beach tomorrow.
- Yasmine: Don't worry! Do you need anything?
- Salwa: Thanks you!
